PROFESSOR EMILY GILBERT

Emily Gilbert is the Director of the Canadian Studies program at University College. Her research focuses on questions relating to citizenship, security, migration, borders, nation-states, globalization, monetary organization, and governance. She relishes being able to engage with and mentor undergraduate students as they research contemporary Canadian issues. When she is not following the intrigue of Canada-US border relations, she can be found cheering on her sons on the soccer pitch.

JENNIFER MCINTYRE

Toronto writer and editor Jennifer McIntyre is much happier profiling others, so turned to a trusted friend for her biography: “Jennifer’s activities include running, cycling (once, memorably, with a broken arm), yoga, and spin classes. She plays several instruments, speaks a couple of languages, and draws cartoons—all with the skill one would expect from a member of MENSA, and marred only slightly by an uncontrollable tendency to pun everyone else under the table.”

YVONNE PALKOWSKI (BA 2004 UC)

Born and raised in Toronto, Yvonne Palkowski studied English and French at University College, U of T. Three days after convocation, she hopped on a plane and spent six months travelling independently for a different kind of education. Upon her reluctant return, she enrolled in Ryerson University’s publishing program. She works as the communications officer for UC and the editor of UC Magazine, a fine alternative to the figure skating career of her childhood aspirations.

Briefly

Letters

REGARDING DONALD AINSLIE'S INSTALLATION SPEECH

last December which was reprinted in UC Magazine ("Keynote," Spring 2012): his selection of the college staircase "chimera" as his principal topic may seem somewhat unusual for academia, but perhaps not. Thus, a formerly legendary sea serpent has been shown by our west coast research group to be based on an actual aquatic reptilian zoological species. Cadborosaurus willsi (Bousfield & LeBlond, 1995) was recorded mainly in coastal marine and fresh waters of British Columbia. Since the species apparently occurs also in China and Japan, the classical Chinese dragon may be based on its lateral view image. Pending capture of actual specimens, the species may also prove identical with the fabulous Loch Ness monster of deep freshwater lakes of northwest Europe. Ainslie has given plausible zoological options for what appears to be a nebulous or concocted image. Considering also its crenulated back, lack of wings, etc., its possible species reality may yet prove worthy of actual scientific investigation.

Editor's Note

THE REACTION TO SPRING'S REDESIGN OF UC MAGAZINE

has been overwhelmingly positive, and it has emboldened us with respect to our latest makeover, the College website. If websites are a window into an institution, then UC must have appeared nearly impenetrable until recently.

With the launch of our completely overhauled website this fall, we sought to make UC more accessible and appealing to our online audience of students and graduates through improved aesthetics and functionality. I encourage you to visit the new site at www.uc.utoronto.ca, and hope you will agree that it presents a face to the world of which we can all be proud.

ONE OF THE GREAT PLEASURES of my first year as Principal at University College has been meeting alumni. They work in almost any field you can name: law, business, art, politics, medicine, academia, architecture, publishing, entertainment, and many more. And while they have chosen different professional paths, they are unified by their ongoing commitment to the values that were nourished during their time at the College.

They continue to value excellence and open inquiry, and they have ascended to positions of leadership by exemplifying these qualities in their day-to-day activities. So many of them have worked to change our society for the better, so that decisions, both public and private, that make a difference to people's lives are premised on respect for difference and an openness to the evidence, wherever it leads.

This issue of UC Magazine is devoted to 100 of the College's most accomplished alumni from our founding in 1853 to the present day. You'll read in these pages how UC is at the centre of their sUCcess.

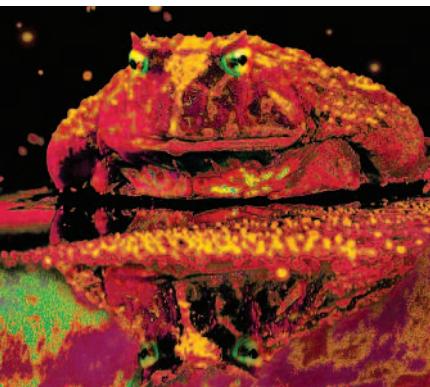

This fall and for the first time ever, the University College community will gather in celebration of the alumni who evoke our greatest pride. The inaugural Alumni of Influence awards will formally recognize the success stories of our alumni, making them known to today's students, fellow graduates, and the public at large—and in so doing, it will mark the start of a new era at UC.

Every year, we will add to this prestigious group on the basis of nominations from alumni and others in the UC community, and we will come together as a community to honour the most recent inductees.

The Alumni of Influence awards are important because they give us occasion to show our pride and to reconnect with each other. I invite you to join us on the evening of November 15 to be part of the birth of this great, new College tradition.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

ALUMNI

of INFLUENCE

University College Alumni of Influence

More than 50,000 people have become part of the University College alumni community since our founding in 1853. Among this privileged group are a considerable number of individuals whose achievements qualify as broadly significant and consequential.

We believe that the success stories of University College alumni should be known to today's students, fellow graduates, and the public at large. In order to recognize the accomplishments of our distinguished graduates, this fall University College proudly presents the first annual Alumni of Influence awards.

The Alumni of Influence are a group of distinguished University College graduates from today and yesterday. They come from many different walks of life: they are actors, artists, athletes, business people, community builders, doctors, humanitarians, leaders, legal professionals, scientists, teachers and more. They are tremendously influential locally, nationally, and internationally.

On the evening of November 15, 2012, University College students, faculty, and graduates will gather in celebration of our Alumni of Influence. Fittingly, the awards gala and dinner will take place beyond campus at Toronto's Eglinton Grand, in the greater community where our alumni have made their marks.

The Eglinton Grand, much like UC, is a holdout from bygone era. Built in 1936 as the flagship cinema for Famous Players, it remains one of the city's finest examples of the art deco style. As with University College, the design elements that define the Eglinton Grand have been faithfully preserved and, on the evening of the awards, the theatre's original marquee and screen will light up with the names of our shining stars—the 100 UC alumni who evoke our greatest pride.

Alumni of Influence Selection Criteria

A selection committee of eight UC alumni, faculty, and friends met to select the inaugural 100 recipients. In future years, ten alumni will be honoured annually. To nominate alumni for next year's awards, please call (416) 978-2968 or visit www.uc.utoronto.ca/aoi

In selecting the 100 Alumni of Influence, the committee considered their contributions to their professional field at an international, national, or local level, as well as their volunteerism within the wider community and their philanthropy. Philanthropy to the University of Toronto specifically was not a factor. Members of the selection committee, sitting politicians, and the current U of T President, Vice-Presidents (UTM and UTSC), and the Chancellor were excluded from consideration.

Dr. Irving Abella (BA 1963 UC)

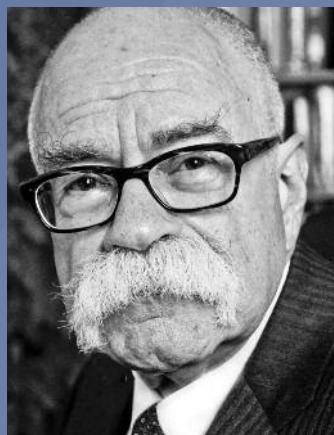

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA
Eminent historian Irving Abella is an expert on the Canadian labour movement and the history of Jews in Canada. The former chair of Vision TV and president of the Canadian Jewish Congress and the Canadian Historical Association, he is currently the Shiff Professor of Canadian Jewish History at York University. Abella has been recognized with the Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship, the National Jewish Book Award, and the Queen's Jubilee Medal, among many other honours. He is married to Supreme Court Justice Rosalie Silberman Abella. The couple met at UC and they have two sons, both lawyers.

The Hon. Madam Justice Rosalie Abella (BA 1967 UC)

SPECIALLY ELECTED FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA

Supreme Court Justice Rosalie Silberman Abella studied arts and law at U of T. She practised civil and family law until the age of 29 when she was appointed to the Ontario Court of Justice, becoming both the youngest and first pregnant judge in Canadian history. She was elevated to the Ontario Court of Appeal and in 2004, she became the first Jewish woman to sit on the Supreme Court of Canada. One of the nation's foremost experts on human rights law, Abella sat on the Ontario Human Rights Commission for five years, and was awarded the International Justice Prize, among many others. She currently holds 30 honorary doctorates. She is married to historian Irving Abella (BA 1963 UC).

Dr. Philip Anisman (BA 1964 UC)

Barrister and solicitor Philip Anisman, a sole practitioner and authority on Canadian securities law, was a professor at York, Western, and Monash Universities, and director of corporate research, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada. He is the author of books, articles, and reports to governments on corporate, securities, constitutional, and administrative law, and has advised securities regulatory organizations in Canada and internationally. He has appeared before all levels of courts in Canada. Having taken undergraduate courses with the outstanding teacher, Professor F.E.L. Priestley, he led efforts that established the annual F.E.L. Priestley Memorial Lectures in the History of Ideas at UC.

Dr. Harry Arthurs (BA 1955 UC)
OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA;
MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF ONTARIO

Scholar Harry Arthurs is an expert in legal history and theory, labour law, globalization, and constitutionalism. A former dean of Osgoode Hall and president of York University, Arthurs has served as an arbitrator and has been called upon by governments to advise on a wide range of legal issues. He is the recipient of the prestigious Killam Prize for lifetime contribution to the social sciences, and the Bora Laskin Prize for his contributions to labour law.

Diane Bean (BA 1969 UC)
Corporate leader Diane Bean is the Executive Vice President of Manulife Financial. She has also held leadership positions with several educational, health-care, and arts organizations. As a member of the Toronto Regional Immigration Employment Council, Bean spearheaded Canada's first-ever internship program for internationally qualified professionals. For four consecutive years, she was named one of Canada's Top 100 Most Powerful Women.

Dr. Wilfred Gordon Bigelow (BA 1935 UC)
OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA
Innovative heart surgeon William Gordon Bigelow was instrumental in the development of open-heart surgery and the cardiac pacemaker. As a captain in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps during WWII, he performed transfusions and surgeries in the field. In the laboratory, he was a pioneer in the use of hypothermia to make open-heart surgery safer. Bigelow also discovered that stimulating a stopped heart with an electrical probe will resume its beating, paving the way for the pacemaker. He was a recipient of the Gairdiner Award for Medical Science and a member of the Canadian Medical Hall of Fame.

Dr. Claude T. Bissell (BA 1936 UC)
COMPANION OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA
Scholar and higher educator leader Claude Bissell was the eighth president of the University of Toronto and a former dean of men at UC. The academic environment created under his leadership attracted luminary thinkers such as Northrop Frye, Marshall McLuhan, and John Polanyi, among others. He led the University through important reforms and a period of unprecedented growth, and his early visit to China foreshadowed the spirit of international exchange at U of T today. His contributions to U of T are honoured in the namesake Claude T. Bissell Building at Robarts Library and Bissell House at University College.

Edward Blake (BA 1854 UC)
Politician and lawyer Edward Blake was the second premier of Ontario and later, the leader of Liberal Party of Canada. Recruited into politics by George Brown, he won the 1871 provincial election, establishing a Liberal dynasty which ruled Ontario for more than thirty years. He later became leader of the federal Liberal Party, and eventually resigned to sit in the British House of Commons as an Irish Nationalist MP. Upon his retirement, Blake returned to Canada to serve the University of Toronto as senator and chancellor.

Prof. Michael Bliss (BA 1962 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA

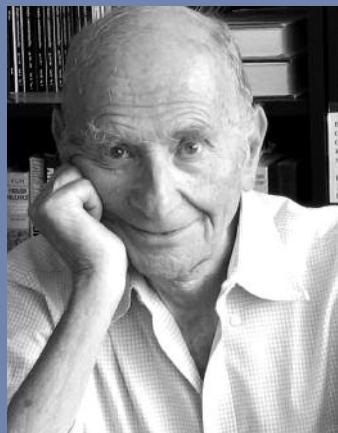

Leading public intellectual and historian Michael Bliss provides insight into the politics and events that shape Canadian life. He is the award-winning author of 14 books on business, politics, and medicine for both scholarly and popular audiences. He retired from U of T's department of history in 2006 after 38-year career during which he earned the elite rank of University Professor, an honour conferred upon less than two percent of tenured faculty.

Mark S. Bonham (BA 1982 UC)

Investment magnate Mark Bonham cut his teeth at UC and the London School of Economics.

The founder of BPI Mutual Funds and Strategic Value Corporation, he is an expert in analyzing the equities of individual companies. He is also an avid supporter of Casey House, the Inside-Out Film Festival, and the University of Toronto. In 2006, he endowed the Mark S. Bonham Centre for Sexual Diversity Studies at University College, a hub for leading-edge teaching, research, and advocacy of sexuality. He is a recipient of U of T's Arbor Award.

Dr. Alan Borovoy (BA 1953 UC)

OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Lawyer, author, and civil libertarian Alan Borovoy is one of Canada's most vociferous defenders of human rights. For more than four decades, he acted as general counsel and chief spokesperson for the Canadian Civil Liberties Association. Borovoy has been a visiting professor at Dalhousie, Toronto, Windsor, and York Universities, and currently holds four honorary doctorates. He has been recognized with the Award for the Advancement of Intellectual Freedom in Canada, and an inscription in the Honour Roll of the aboriginal people Treaty Number 3.

Leonard Braithwaite

(BCom 1950 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF ONTARIO

Lawyer Leonard Braithwaite was the first black Canadian to be elected to a provincial legislature. Born in Toronto to West Indian immigrants and raised during the Great Depression, Braithwaite served overseas with the RCAF during WWII. In 1963, he was elected to the Ontario Legislature as a Liberal member, where he served as critic of labour and welfare, advocated for the admission of female pages, and helped revoke a regulation that had allowed for racial segregation in schools. He was recognized with numerous awards, including U of T's Chancellor's Award and the Black Alumni Association's Lifetime Achievement Award.

Rudolph Bratty

(BA 1953 UC)

Lawyer and real estate tycoon Rudolph Bratty has built communities across the Greater Toronto Area. He is the founder of Bratty & Partners LLP, a law firm specializing in real estate, development, and planning. As chair and CEO of The Remington Group, he is also a real estate developer whose projects have changed the landscape of the city. Bratty has been honoured with a lifetime achievement award from the Building Industry and Land Development Association, as well as a star on the Italian Walk of Fame on College Street in Toronto's Little Italy.

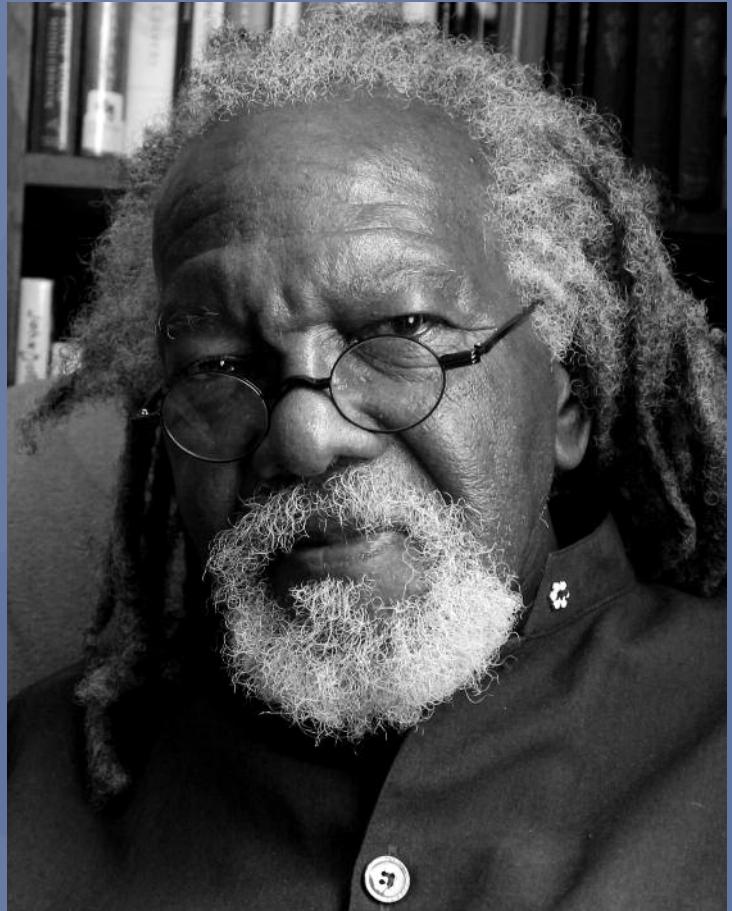

PHOTOGRAPHY
Alan Borovoy
Law Foundation of Ontario

Dr. David Charbonneau

(BA 1996 UC)

Harvard astronomy professor David Charbonneau searches for Earth-like planets that can sustain life beyond our solar system. He is the recipient of the NASA Exceptional Scientific Achievement Medal, the Sackler Prize in the Physical Sciences, and the National Science Foundation's Alan T. Waterman Award. In 2007, he was named Scientist of the Year by Discover Magazine. Currently, he is working on NASA- and National Science Foundation-funded projects which aim to detect distant planets capable of supporting life.

Dr. Austin Clarke (1959 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF ONTARIO

Austin Clarke is a celebrated author of novels and essays on the Canadian immigrant experience. A prolific author of 11 novels, six short story collections, and five books of nonfiction, he is the recipient of the Rogers Writers' Trust Fiction Prize, the Toronto Book Award, and the W.O. Mitchell Award for support of young writers. In 2002 he won both the Giller Prize and the Commonwealth Writer's Prize for The Polished Hoe. Beyond writing, he has served as Cultural Attaché of Barbados, manager of the Caribbean Broadcasting Corporation in Barbados, and on the Immigration and Refugee Board of Canada.

Dr. William Edmund Clark

(BA 1969 UC)

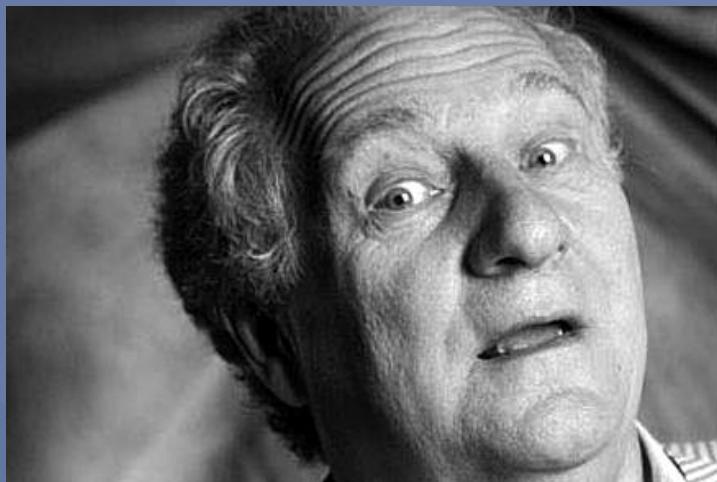

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

As President and CEO of TD Bank Financial Group, Ed Clark is one of the most influential figures in the financial industry in Canada. Under his leadership, TD Canada Trust grew into the nation's second-biggest bank by assets. For his extraordinary vision, Clark has been honoured with the Egale Leadership Award for support of LGBT communities, as well as the Catalyst Canada Honour for women's advancement. Clark was named Canada's Outstanding CEO of the Year in 2010, followed by the Ivey Business Leader Award in 2011, and an appearance on Barron's prestigious annual list of the world's top 30 CEOs in 2012.

Dr. Dian Cohen (BA 1955 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Economics consultant, journalist, and broadcaster Dian Cohen has helped Canadians make sense of the economy and personal finance for more than four decades. She began her career as a syndicated columnist writing about money matters in the 1970s, and parlayed her success into a radio and television career with CTV and CBC. She is the author of a number of books on economics for popular audiences, and her writing has been recognized with the National Business Writing Award and the Literary Guild Award.

John Robert Colombo

(BA 1959 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Writer and folklorist John Robert Colombo is the ultimate enthusiast of Canadian culture. Known nationally as the Master Gatherer, he has compiled more than 200 anthologies of quotations, lore, literature, mystery, and horror. A frequent commentator and avid supporter of the arts, Colombo has been described as a “national treasure” by The Globe and Mail. For his prolific body of work and dedication to preserving Canadian culture, Colombo has been honoured with the Centennial Medal, the Order of Cyril and Methodius, the Harbourfront Literary Award, and an honorary doctorate from York University.

Dr. Ruth M. Corbin (BSc 1972 UC)

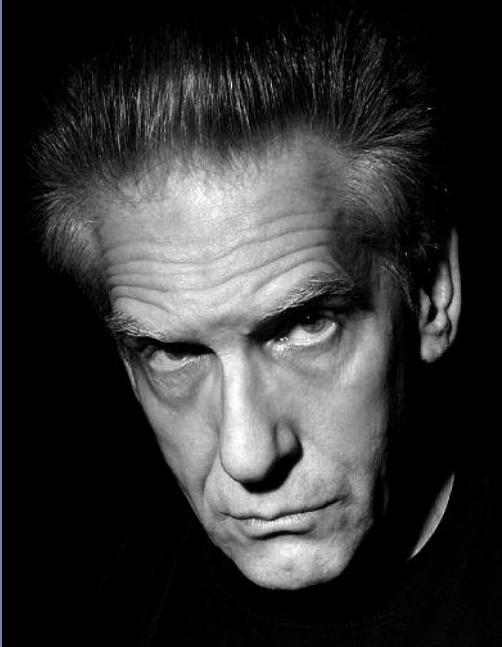

Corporate director, business executive, and psychologist, Ruth Corbin is a Canadian authority on intellectual property policy and protection. She is an adjunct professor at Osgoode Hall and the author of several books, articles, and public addresses. In her corporate career, Corbin has held top management positions with Kroll Canada, Angus Reid Group, Leger Marketing, and Royal Trust, among others. An in-demand speaker, she has been named among Canada’s 100 Most Powerful Women and Canada’s Top Women Entrepreneurs. She is currently managing partner of CorbinPartners Inc, a firm specializing in intellectual property auditing and forensic marketing evidence.

Marshall Cohen (BA 1956 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Lawyer and corporate titan Marshall Cohen has led some of Canada’s most recognizable brands, including The Molson Companies Ltd, Barrick Gold Corporation, TD Ameritrade, and AIG, among others. He has lent his expertise to a number of non-profits, including the C.D. Howe Institute, the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, and Mount Sinai Hospital. Currently, Cohen is retired counsel at Cassels Brock, a business law firm in Toronto.

Dr. David Cronenberg

(BA 1967 UC)

OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA
Filmmaker David Cronenberg is widely acknowledged as one of the greatest directors of all time. A native of Toronto, he studied arts at UC where the short film of a classmate sparked his interest in cinema. The director of the acclaimed Crash, eXistenZ, A History of Violence, Eastern Promises, A Dangerous Method, and Cosmopolis, among many others, Cronenberg has a reputation for making highly original and daring films. In recognition of his incredible body of work, Cronenberg was awarded the Carrosse D'Or for lifetime achievement from the Cannes Film Festival, as well as the Légion d'honneur from the government of France.

Prof. Janet Currie (BA 1982 UC)

Prominent economist Janet Currie studies how socioeconomic factors affect health and well-being. She has taught at UCLA, MIT, and Columbia University, and is the editor of several economic journals. Currie is also Vice-President of the American Economics Association, and the Director of the National Bureau of Economic Research's Program on Children. She has written extensively on early intervention programs, programs to expand health insurance and improve health care, public housing, and food and nutrition programs.

Prof. Ronald Daniels (BA 1982 UC)

The former dean and James M. Tory Professor at U of T's Faculty of Law, Ronald Daniels is a noted scholar of law and economics and a leader in higher education. He is currently President of The Johns Hopkins University. His research focuses on the intersections of law, economics, development, and public policy, in such areas as corporate and securities law, social and economic regulation, and the role of law and legal institutions in promoting third-world development. He is the author or editor of seven books, and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The Hon. William G. Davis

(BA 1951 UC)

COMPANION OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF ONTARIO
Lawyer and statesman Bill Davis served as the eighteenth premier of Ontario from 1971 to 1985. Investors and the media alike consistently look to economist David A. Rosenberg for insightful financial forecasting. Currently the chief economist and strategist at Gluskin Sheff + Associates, he was formerly a leading economist for Merrill-Lynch. Rosenberg has been named Economist of the Year by Fortune Magazine and most accurate forecaster by MSNBC. He is the author of the influential economics newsletter Breakfast With Dave.

Prof. Jeffrey S. Rosenthal

(BSc 1988 UC)

FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA

Statistician and best-selling author Jeffrey Rosenthal has a knack for explaining probability concepts to expert and popular audiences alike. He completed his PhD in mathematics at Harvard University at the tender age of 24. A professor in the department of statistics at U of T, he is often called upon by the media for commentary and to perform statistical analysis. He is the author of several books and articles on probability, and he has been recognized with numerous awards for his teaching and contributions to statistical research.

Dr. Mark Rowswell (BA 1988 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Entertainer and cultural ambassador Mark Rowswell has built bridges between Canada and China. Widely known in China by his stage name Dashan, he rose to fame as a TV host proficient in Chinese. He is the first foreigner to have been formally accepted as a performer of xiangsheng, a form of traditional Chinese comedy. Currently Canada's Goodwill Ambassador to China, Rowswell was also Canada's commissioner general for Expo 2010 in Shanghai, and a torch-bearer for the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing.

Dr. Douglas Salmon (BA 1951 UC)

Pioneering physician and scholar Douglas Salmon was the first black surgeon in Canada. The orphaned son of Jamaican immigrants, his resourcefulness and self-reliance drove him to fulfill his childhood dream of becoming a doctor. His medical career was spent at Centenary Hospital in Scarborough where he was elevated to chief of general surgery, the first black person in Canada to hold such a position. Also an accomplished pianist, upon being denied entry to performance halls he led successful protests against racial discrimination.

Dr. William Saywell (BA 1960 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Higher education leader and scholar William Saywell is the author of several books on Chinese history and current Chinese foreign and military affairs. The former president of Simon Fraser University, he has extensive experience managing relationships in Asia, and has helped create business opportunities for Canadians in China.

Paul Shaffer (BA 1971 UC)

OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Band leader and television personality Paul Shaffer is the musical director of The Late Show With David Letterman. A sociology graduate, he began his career directing and playing piano in musicals, then became a band member on Saturday Night Live. Shaffer has released two solo albums and recorded with a wide variety of artists such as B.B. King, Diana Ross, Yoko Ono, Cher, and Brian Wilson. He makes frequent cameo appearances in films, and has served as the spokesperson for Epilepsy Canada since 2002.

Dr. Frank Shuster (BA 1939 UC)

OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Comedian Frank Shuster was one half of the iconic Canadian comedy duo Wayne and Shuster. Along with UC classmate Johnny Wayne, he developed their trademark brand of satirical, literate slapstick. The pair performed skits on CBC Radio throughout the 1940s and gained international renown through guest appearances on television in the 1950s, notably on The Ed Sullivan Show and the BBC. As the straight man to Wayne's funny man, Shuster was the relatively serious member of the duo.

Arnold Smith (BA c.1930 UC)

OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF THE COMPANIONS OF HONOUR

Arnold Smith was the first secretary-general of the Commonwealth. A Rhodes scholar, he held diplomatic appointments in the United States, England, and Cambodia. He served as Canadian ambassador to Egypt and the USSR, the latter during the height of the Cold War. He was also instrumental in the development of the Commonwealth flag.

The Rev. Dr. Wilfred Cantwell Smith (BA 1938 UC)

OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Religious historian Wilfred Cantwell Smith was an early and influential proponent of interfaith dialogue. An expert in oriental languages, he founded the Institute of Islamic Studies at McGill University and the department of comparative religion at Dalhousie. He was best known for arguing that the term religion, before the seventeenth century, meant a quality of piety common among faithful from various traditions, and that its modern definition as a set of beliefs arose from conceptual slippage.

OFFICER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA

Colonel Charles Perry Stacey was the official historian of the Canadian army during WWII. He studied at Oxford and Princeton, where he taught briefly before the war. An exhaustive researcher and elegant stylist, he authored four volumes on WWII and contributed much to the study of controversial operations such as the Dieppe Raid and Operation Spring. A pioneer in Canada's military history, he taught at the University of Toronto from 1959 to 1975.

Dr. Mary Alice Stuart (BA 1949 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;
MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF ONTARIO

Community titan Mary Alice Stuart was a driving force in education, healthcare, business, and the arts. She fulfilled important roles in various public and private organizations, and notably served as chair of Canada's first-ever $100 million-plus fundraising campaign. Stuart was the first woman president of the Canadian Club of Toronto, the founding chair of the board of Jazz.FM91.1, and a director of the Bank of Montreal and of S.C. Johnson and Son, Canada.

Kay Worthington (BA 1983 UC)

Two-time Olympic gold medalist Kay Worthington is an example of perseverance and dedication. As a student at UC, she trained for the Canadian national rowing team while studying international relations. She attended three Olympic Games, striking gold in the women's four and eight in Barcelona in 1992. After her competitive athletic career, she became a trader in Manhattan and served as the director of the Princeton rowing association.

Economist and higher education leader Leonard Waverman is an expert in the productivity impact of telecommunications. The former chair of the London Business School, he is currently Dean of the Haskayne School of Business at the University of Calgary, where he has introduced a focus on ethical leadership, entrepreneurship, and energy. Waverman has also been named one of the 50 most influential leaders in the telecommunications industry by Global Telecoms Magazine.

Johnny Wayne (BA 1940 UC)

Legendary comedian Johnny Wayne is remembered as the mad-cap half of the iconic Canadian comedy duo Wayne and Shuster. Along with classmate and fellow UC Follies alum Frank Shuster (BA 1939 UC), he is credited with founding the great Canadian tradition in sketch comedy. Their signature, literate slapstick style of comedy provided the basis for an enormously successful career on radio, stage, and television which lasted nearly five decades.

Dr. Rose Wolfe (BA 1938 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA;

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF ONTARIO

University administrator, social worker, and philanthropist Rose Wolfe has worked tirelessly to improve public life. The founding president of Canadian Jewish News, she is a dynamic presence on the boards of numerous healthcare, religious, and cultural organizations. Wolfe is the former chancellor of the University of Toronto, where she established a chair in Holocaust studies as well as scholarships for aboriginal students.

Elwy Yost (BA 1948 UC)

MEMBER OF THE ORDER OF CANADA

Television personality Elwy Yost was best known as the avuncular host of TVO's Saturday Night at the Movies, of which he hosted more than 1000 episodes over 25 years. He studied sociology at UC, and with a classmate made a movie called In Between, one of the first independent films in Canada. A classic cinema enthusiast, he interviewed several movie stars for television and was the author of four books about film.

BULLYING

IT'S GOTTEN
BUT
GETTING

AUTHOR
Jennifer McIntyre

IMAGINE THAT YOU'RE AT WORK.
YOU'RE LOOKING AT A SPREADSHEET, OR PUTTING A PRESENTATION
TOGETHER.

SUDDENLY A WAD OF PAPER HITS
YOU IN THE HEAD.

"FAGGOT!" HISSES A VOICE CLOSE BY.
IT'S THAT GUY FROM ACCOUNTS PAYABLE,
THE ONE WHO SPITS IN YOUR LUNCH.

YOU TELL YOUR BOSS, BUT SHE'S NO HELP.
LATER THAT DAY, THE BULLY TELLS YOU THAT HE AND HIS PALS FROM DESIGN ARE GOING
TO WAIT FOR YOU IN THE STAFF PARKING LOT
AFTER WORK AND BEAT YOUR HEAD IN.

Sound unbelievable? Certainly in a Canadian workplace today it would be. But it's an ongoing reality for thousands of school-age kids across the country, who spend their days being terrorized, taunted, threatened, and shunned by their peers—their "coworkers," if you will—simply for being "different" in any way.

Canadian comedian and political satirist Rick Mercer agrees. "Most of us go to work, and if any individual was wandering around the workplace, walking up to someone and saying "Hey, you fuckin' fag!" and spitting on them... and punching them, the police would be called. They'd be charged."

"But high school is like this bizarre social experiment where that's allowed to go on." He laughs incredulously. "The only other place you see that type of behaviour is in fictionalized versions of prison! School is one of the few places where you're forced to be with people you don't want to be with on a daily basis."

Bullying has, of course, been going on forever—there is more than a grain of truth in the saying, "Children can be so cruel." But in the past decade or so, the reach of that cruelty has been extended exponentially, thanks to the Internet.

Says Mercer, "In my day, if someone was being bullied, at least at the end of the day, at home, they were in a safe place. Well, those safe places don't exist any more because a lot of the bullying is happening on a 'cyber' level."

Bullies can now follow their victims home via instant messaging, email, and social media such as Facebook and Twitter. Kids can—and do—set up hate websites or run vicious online polls ("Is Margaret a slut? Yes/No?") about their targets, sometimes with tragic results.

After the suicides of Ontario students Jamie Hubley and Shaquille Wisdom (in 2011 and 2007, respectively), both of whom had been targeted by anti-gay bullies, Mercer, who is gay himself, broadcast two forceful anti-bullying "rants" on his weekly show, The Mercer Report.

As well-received and powerful as his words were, however, Mercer feels strongly that the most persuasive solutions will ultimately come from young people themselves—in the form of gay-straight alliances (GSAs) in high schools, and of student-led anti-bullying initiatives.

“I DON’T KNOW IF [BULLYING]
WILL EVER COMPLETELY GO AWAY..”

“Kids are using their equity for good, more now than when I was in school,” he says, “and I think there’s an obligation on [us as adults] to support those organizations because I think that’s where the solutions are going to be. Adults can talk about [bullying] and government can legislate about it and schools can administer it, but at the end of the day it’s going to be up to the young people themselves.”

University of Toronto law professor and Director of UC’s Mark S. Bonham Centre for Sexual Diversity Studies, Brenda Cossman, emphatically agrees. She credits student activism as the impetus behind the passage of Ontario’s Bill 13 in June, which clears the way for GSAs in that province’s high schools and puts the onus squarely on principals to intervene in cases of bullying and harassment.

“This [legislation] bubbled up from kids trying to organize gay-straight alliances, who had the audacity to stand up and say ‘We’re going to do this!’, when all the adults around them, all the authority figures, were saying ‘don’t,’” says Cossman.

“It amazes me that what was a grassroots, ‘from-the-ground-up’ struggle is now being affirmed by legislation. These kids now have the heft of legislation behind them.”

A lesbian and mother to two young daughters, Cossman’s particular focus is on providing safe spaces for lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, and “questioning”, or LGBTQ, kids, whose suicide rate is many times the national average.

“My concern is for LGBTQ kids because of my work,” says Cossman, whose research focuses on the law and sexuality. “But there really is no place where that line stops and ‘the other kids who are different’ starts. I think it’s just kids who are different [who get bullied].”

“I think we have an obligation to kids who are different to do something about this, and maybe in some ways make [school] more like a workplace where this sort of stuff is unacceptable.”

“We have achieved equality for [gay and lesbian] grownups now,” says Cossman. “But in high school it is still no safer to come out. In the workplace, name-calling and pushing would not be accepted. In high school, though, it’s still Lord of the Flies in there!”

University College student Brock Hessel can attest to this—and to the power of young people helping each other out. Now an anti-bullying activist himself, the shy, funny 26-year-old was bullied mercilessly during his high school years not long ago in small-town Strathroy, Ontario.

“I was bullied because I was gay,” he recalls. “People would call me fag and those kinds of names—before I knew I was queer myself.”

(“I had no idea!” he laughs ironically. “In a way, they actually helped me!”)

Hessel dropped out of school at 16 and moved in with family friends in Toronto, where he enrolled in the Triangle Program, an alternative high school for at-risk LGBTQ kids. He struggled with depression and drug addiction but with the help of addiction counselling and some determined teachers at Triangle, made his way back into mainstream education.

He now spends time back in the “trenches” of York Region high schools as part of an outreach group called YouthSpeak, talking directly to kids about bullying and its collateral damage—addiction, self-harm, suicide, and mental health issues.

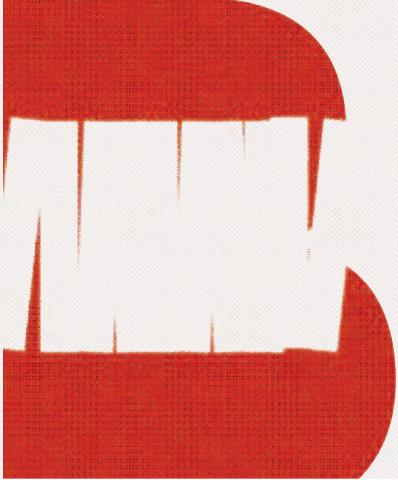

Like Cossman and Mercer, Hessel too is encouraged by the changes he’s seen even in the few years since he himself was in high school.

“I think there’s a lot more awareness of bullying and its effects,” he says. “I don’t want to make over-generalizations—I think in some schools it’s just the same stuff I was dealing with. But for instance, I spoke at [a high school] in this small town and it was awesome. This kid came up to me and said ‘I’m gay and I’m out and I have friends!’ And I was really surprised—and really happy.”

“I don’t know if [bullying] will ever completely go away, though,” says Hessel. “There’s always going to be some kind of hierarchy. It might become a little bit more subtle but I think it will always be there in some capacity.”

“But every time I leave [a speaking engagement], I feel like I’ve actually done something, like all the shit I went through was actually worth it.”

“I feel like I’m actually giving back, and maybe in some way helping to stop the cycle.”

According to Statistics Canada:

Hate crimes motivated by sexual orientation doubled in 2008, and increased by another 18% in 2009.

74% of hate crimes motivated by sexual orientation are violent, with 63% resulting in injury to the victim.

The peak age of those accused of hate crimes in Canada is 17 to 18; educational facilities rank second among offence locations.

What is it like to have worked with some of the greatest directors in film? How has the experience informed your work as a director?

I feel I've been really privileged to have such an amazing ad hoc film school. Most filmmakers don't get the opportunity to watch other filmmakers work. As I began making short films in my early twenties, I was able to watch many different directors work in completely different genres and styles. It was a great way of figuring out what worked for me and what didn't in my own work. Atom Egoyan and Wim Wenders were huge influences on me. They are both incredibly rigorous, organized, and prepared. It leads to an incredibly calm, focused environment which I've tried to emulate on my own sets. Atom has also been a constant mentor to me, advising me on drafts of scripts and various cuts of my films.

How do you choose your roles as an actor?

I think I used to choose roles based almost exclusively on the screenplay. Now that I understand more about the process, I make the decision almost entirely on who the director is. It's been interesting to learn over the years that a great script means nothing if it's not in the hands of a great director. On the other hand, I've occasionally seen directors take mediocre scripts and turn them into great films. It's interesting how important the director's hand is.

EXTRAVAGANTLY LUCKY THING IN THE WORLD TO GET TO SPEND YEARS READING AND LEARNING.

How does screenwriting compare to acting and directing? What was your experience screenwriting Take This Waltz?

Screenwriting allows for so much more reflection and solitude. I think it's my favourite part of the process because everything is still possible and not mitigated by the exigencies of production. I find it to be a joyful process as well as agonizingly lonely. It is so magical, later, to have dozens of extremely talented people make those ideas you've had alone in a quiet room become tangible and real. Take This Waltz was written very instinctually and quickly. I then spent a long time figuring out what it was that I had written and trying to make sense and a structure out of it.

There is a strong Canadian element to the films you make: Away From Her is based on a short story by Alice Munro, Take This Waltz is set in Toronto, and your next project is an adaptation of Margaret Atwood's Alias Grace. Why is it important for you to tell Canadian stories?

I think I identify strongly with where I'm from. I also think art is most interesting when it is specific. I get a lot of questions about why I make my films "so Canadian" but those questions only come from other Canadians. When filmmakers from other countries set their films clearly in the places they are from it seems natural to them and they don't question it. I think Canadians have become so used to trying to disguise themselves as Americans in films that it seems like a real statement to not do that. It's a political statement just to be ourselves! I think when a story is set clearly in a specific place, it allows people in other places to relate to it more as opposed to less—which is the assumption behind trying to pretend we are not specifically Canadian.

Everyone in the world lives in a specific place, so it feels closer to home to see a story set in a specific place rather than a generic one. I think it allows the universality of the human themes to come to the surface more easily than when we try to make ourselves seem generically North American.

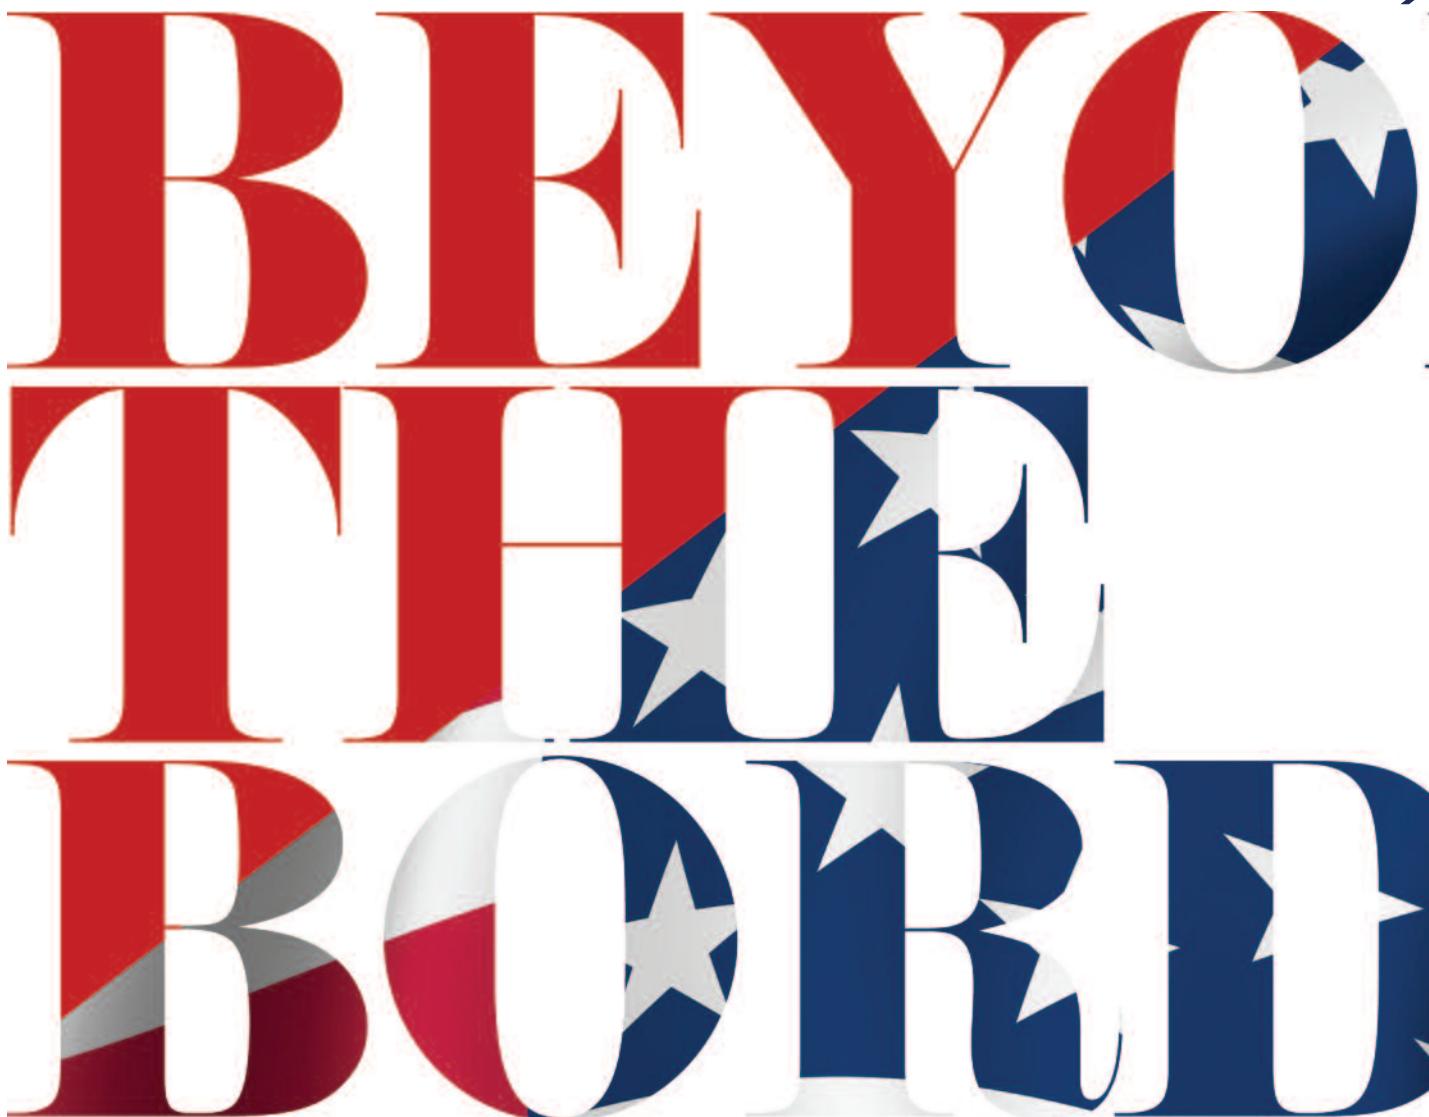

What advice do you give students as artist-in-residence at University College?

I'm not sure how much advice I have. I'm excited to have conversations and learn about what they are doing. I never had a university education and I'm so thrilled to be spending time here. I did the academic bridging program last summer, which was one of the best experiences I've ever had and made me certain that I wanted to go back to school. I was hoping to return this year in some capacity, so I was elated to get the offer to spend time at University College. I guess my only advice is to get everything you can from your years in University and enjoy it. From the outside, as someone who didn't go to University, it seems like the most extravagantly lucky thing in the world to get to spend years reading and learning.

What would be your career if you weren't in film?

I know I'd like to write. I'd like to think I could write something outside the medium of film. Time will tell I guess. I'd love to major in Canadian history and be an academic. I'd also like to be a lot more politically active than I have been of late. And I'd love to teach drama in an elementary school. These are my long-term pipe dreams.

On December 7, 2011, Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper and US President Barack Obama announced Beyond the Border: A Shared Vision for Perimeter Security and Economic Competitiveness Action Plan. The sweeping, new deal has been lauded by some for increasing border security and promoting bilateral trade. Others have expressed concern that such benefits will come at the expense of personal freedom and privacy. Still others remain unaware of the agreement or under-informed. UC Magazine looked to homegrown experts—faculty, alumni, and students—for insight into the plan.

DEPARTMENT OF GEOGRAPHY

THE OBJECTIVE OF BEYOND THE BORDER is to create a security perimeter around Canada and the United States that will relieve some of the pressure on the internal border. This involves working collaboratively on security measures, dealing with security threats before they arrive to North America, and building resilience to security events.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper has described Beyond the Border as the most important step forward in Canada-US cooperation since the North American Free Trade Agreement. Business leaders have largely been enthusiastic about the investment in infrastructure, cargo-screening initiatives, and regulatory coordination.

Policy institutes and privacy commissioners, however, have raised concerns about more extensive cross-border information-sharing. A proposed integrated entry-and-exit register would enable more multiparty monitoring of travelers. Multiple concerns have been raised regarding data collection, opportunities for redress and appeal, and appropriate regulatory frameworks to maintain privacy. Others are worried that this will require that Canada record biometric data, such as fingerprints and iris scans, of all its visitors, as is already done in the US.

Very little attention has been directed to the changes in cross-border law enforcement that are formalized in the agreement. Beyond the Border calls for the expansion of cross-border law enforcement whereby designated police and border agents are authorized to enforce the law on either side of the border, while under the supervision and direction of authorities from the host country.

A pilot project in maritime cross-border law enforcement is already underway. In 2009, a framework agreement for the Shiprider program (officially known as Integrated Cross-Border Maritime Law Enforcement Operations) was signed between Canada and the US. Shiprider enables vessels on shared waterways and seaways to be jointly crewed by designated RCMP officers and the US Coast Guard. As of June, 2012, Canada has passed legislation that bestows designated US police officers and border agents with the same authority as an RCMP officer.

The Beyond the Border plan sets out to regularize the Shiprider initiative and to expand its mandate onto land crossings. It proposes creating Next-Generation (NxtGen) initiatives that are designed to facilitate cross-border intelligence and information-sharing at and between land borders. NxtGen will also, like Shiprider, authorize designated officers to enforce the law on either side of the border.

These new forms of security cooperation raise pressing questions. When does a cross-border initiative start and end? How far does a pursuit extend over water, land, and in the air? Who has the authority to make these decisions? Who is responsible if something goes wrong? What mechanisms for redress, if any, will be put in place?

Addressing these questions head on is especially important in that the new initiatives do not just involve border agencies, but also draw together Public Safety Canada and the US Department of Homeland Security. Cross-border law enforcement is thus being brought under the purview of national security, even though the majority of illegal activities at the border are criminal activities such as smuggling. It remains to be seen whether the full incorporation of national security agencies will change the mandate of border agents, and whether the full arm of national security will be used to apprehend cigarette smugglers. Other issues to be addressed are how information will be gathered as part of these maneuvers, how privacy will be maintained, and what oversight regarding privacy and human rights will be put into place.

The shift towards cross-border law-enforcement promises to dramatically reshape our understanding of policing, border security, and territorial sovereignty. It raises thorny challenges regarding human rights provisions, legal authority, and accountability, which will all need to be worked out in the coming months. Unfortunately, clarity on these matters will likely only ensue in the wake of an unfortunate incident where the problems of cross-border jurisdiction are thrown into relief.

What is already abundantly clear, however, is that the move towards cross-border law enforcement does not mean a reduction in security costs, as many the proponents of Beyond the Border proclaim. Rather, it will require more personnel, more training, more infrastructure, and more expense. Beyond the Border is thus about more securitization, not less.

HOW FAR DOES A PURSUIT EXTEND OVER WATER, LAND, AND IN THE AIR?

Given the implications around cross-border law-enforcement it is worrying that there has been so little public debate about these new initiatives. For a long time the government sought to keep discussions regarding the bilateral negotiations quiet, to avoid probing questions from privacy commissioners and human rights agencies. This secrecy, however, only adds fuel to the suspicion regarding the new initiatives. More open and transparent debate regarding border security needs to take place. Unfortunately, the rhetoric of national security helps to quash any such discussion.

Since the 9/11 terrorist attacks, priority areas in border security have shifted, from drug and weapons smuggling and unauthorized immigration, to counter-terrorism and national security. This has, in turn, resulted in the emergence of new border technologies and innovations to track and secure the movement of individuals across the border.

New border policies were outlined as early as December 2001, just months after the 9/11 attacks, when Canada and the United States signed the Smart Border accord. The agreement facilitated bilateral trade, commerce, and mobility through technological innovations and risk management practices. Pre-clearance programs such as Fast and Secure Trade (FAST) and NEXUS allow registered participants who are deemed to be of minimal security risk to move more quickly across the border in designated lanes. FAST is designed to ease traffic congestion by working with the private sector to facilitate border crossings by commercial vehicles, while the NEXUS program grants expedited passage to low-risk travelers and elite citizens.

Beyond the Border extends these pre-clearance programs. The new agreement also goes further with respect to bilateral collaboration by calling for increased sharing of information, such as the biographical data of everyone entering or exiting either country. Many Canadians are reasonably concerned about the implications of this security strategy for their privacy and personal freedom. Others have complained that the agreement is another example of American interests being imposed on Canada.

We decided to gauge the public's knowledge and opinion of the sweeping changes to border practices that have been implemented over the past decade. We traveled to the Canada-US border at Niagara Falls to survey individuals about their wait times at the border, whether they had been subjected to security searches, whether they supported the use of biometrics for identification, and whether they were aware of the recent Canada-US border agreement.

The biggest challenge that we faced was finding a place to distribute the questionnaire. Staff at tourism offices and chain stores notably would not grant us permission to conduct the survey on their premises. We opted to set up in the public space on the Canadian side of Niagara Falls and managed to survey over 100 people.

What became abundantly clear is that the vast majority of people are not informed about bilateral border agreements between Canada and the United States. Also, while there has been increasing securitization at the border in the last decade, the responses to our survey suggest that the public is not engaged in the changes that are taking place, even though there is concern about some of the initiatives.

It is our opinion that some of the changes to border security benefit travelers, while others may have dire consequences. Clouding these initiatives in secrecy does a disservice to the public in both scenarios. We hope that more public attention will turn to these initiatives so that Canadians become better informed about the changes taking place, and better positioned to participate in the shaping of border policies.

International Trade Branch
Ontario Ministry of Economic Development and Innovation

One of the main objectives of the Beyond the Border agreement is to increase North American economic competitiveness by aligning customs procedures, expanding pre-inspection and pre-clearance programs, and developing cross-border infrastructure and technology.

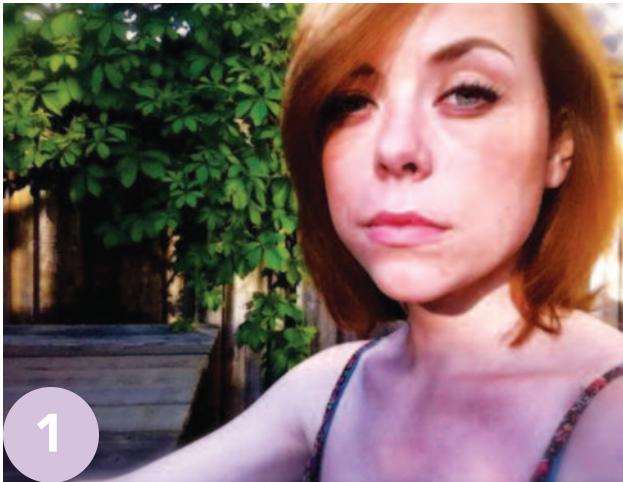

Canada-US trade is crucial to the Ontario economy. The NAFTA framework, geographic proximity, market size, and similar business environments make the United States the natural first export market for small- and medium-sized companies across a wide range of business sectors, and a critical market for revenue expansion. The USA absorbs 77% of Ontario's domestic exports worldwide, and Ontario's exports to the USA have grown in each of the past two years.

The International Trade Branch of the Ontario Ministry of Economic Development and Innovation provides customized assistance to Ontario companies seeking to export their products and professional services to key markets worldwide. Services range from exporter skills development and market seminars to sector-specific business partnering, trade missions, and in-market advocacy. Seminars on NAFTA and US customs documentation provide Ontario manufacturers with practical, hands-on information to help them to understand the customs documentation requirements of US Customs and Border Protection in order to clear goods into the United States.

The Beyond the Border plan presents a new set of policies and practices for business to observe in order to facilitate their cross-border trade. Ontario business seeking export success in the USA and other international markets are encouraged to consult the International Trade Branch for more information.

WHAT UC PEOPLE ARE LISTENING TO 01.

KEELY NUGENT (BA 2007 UC)
ADVERTISING PROFESSIONAL

"Electric Light Orchestra is probably my favorite group of all time. Not a lot of people my age know about them, but Jeff Lynne is a musical genius. I've been a longtime fan of Spoon, too. Over the summer I really enjoyed Miami Horror and Yeasayer because they're great summer bands. I believe that music influences mood, so I wanted my summer music to be fun and befitting of road trips and days at the beach."

02.
JOHN MARSHALL
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR, DEPARTMENT FOR THE
STUDY OF RELIGION
VICE-PRINCIPAL,
UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

"My music falls into two categories: driving and housework, and office work. Category one these days is Eric Clapton, Cream, The Band, Elvis Costello, Lucinda Williams, or podcasts like Wire Tap or The Age of Persuasion. Category two is Sigur Rós, Zero7, Mozart, Beethoven (but it sometimes feels blasphemous to use classical music as background)."

03.
JUSTIN STRUSS
FOURTH-YEAR STUDENT IN HEALTH STUDIES

“Alanis Morissette’s angry rock helps me vent my frustrations. She has helped me through many stressful times at U of T! When I’m in more of a cheerful, relaxed mood I like to listen to alternative tunes by The Bird and The Bee or The Yeah Yeah Yeahs. Sometimes I’m in the mood for classical, other times folk music, but whether I’m driving to school or taking a break from homework, my iPod keeps me sane.

“I love a good, solid harmony and The Civil Wars have insane voices that blend together so well. Their song Poison and Wine is beautiful. And as corny as it sounds, Mumford & Sons makes my soul happy. I saw them live in Toronto recently and it was one of the best concerts I’ve attended in a long time. They are constantly playing on my iPod.”
